The First Sermon of Jesus

The story of Jesus' first sermon gives us a chance to check our own motivation. Are we looking to Jesus to get personal favors? Or are we looking to Jesus because he is the fulfillment of God's plan? Are we participating in religious activities because we want to be served, or because we realize that Jesus calls us to serve? Are we in this for our own good and to meet our own needs, or to see the incredible good God does in many places and make ourselves available for God to meet the needs of others? Do we believe so unwaveringly in the grace of God – a grace we sing of as amazing – that we believe in it just as firmly for those on the outside as we do for those on the inside? Jesus didn't just come for the people of Nazareth; he didn't just come for those who were already on the inside track. Thanks be to God, Jesus came for outsiders, too. If he hadn't, none of us would be here. Jesus was run out of town because some people in his hometown didn't want us – Gentiles, foreigners, outsiders – to be recipients of God's grace. Yet, Jesus made room for us. When we put it that way, maybe we can make some room, too.

A.J.Thomas
