The Assumption of Mary

Pondering Mary's unique role in the history of salvation and her perfect union with her Son, the early Church made the case for her Assumption in its faith that she ultimately shared in his glory. She was, after all, present at his incarnation and birth, present with Joseph at the Temple in Jerusalem, present throughout his 'hidden life,' present at the first miracle at Cana, present at significant moments in his public ministry, present at his crucifixion and placed in the care of John the Beloved Disciple, present at the beginnings of the Church. She could truly say of Jesus, 'this is my body, this is my blood.'

Scripture scholars through the centuries have also highlighted various themes in the Bible that support the Church's belief in the Assumption of Mary. Great works of Christian art depict the death or 'dormition' of Mary as well as portrayals of her being taken, body and soul, into Heaven. Mary's Assumption anticipates our ultimate union with Christ. The Catechism of the Catholic Church (CCC) states:

'Finally the Immaculate Virgin, preserved free from all stain of original sin, when the course of her earthly life was finished, was taken up body and soul into heavenly glory, and exalted by the Lord as Queen over all things, so that she might be the more fully conformed to her Son, the Lord of lords and conqueror of sin and death.' The Assumption of the Blessed Virgin is a singular participation in her Son's Resurrection and an anticipation of the resurrection of other Christians (CCC, 966).

The thirst for power and possessions knows no limits. In this system, which tends to devour everything which stands in the way of increased profits, whatever is fragile, like the environment, is defenceless before the interests of a deified market, which become the only rule.
Pope Francis.
