Christ the King

In 1925 Pope Pius XI established the major feast of Christ the King. In 1969 Pope Paul VI expanded the name of the feast to 'Christ the King of the Universe' and moved the celebration of the feast to the last Sunday before the season of Advent.

The 1920s and 1930s were years when there was a major political movement in many countries of the world - a growing cult of 'the Great Leader'. In Germany, Hitler led the racist and oppressive Nazis into power; in Italy, the fascists, led by Mussolini took power; in Spain, General Franco won the civil war; and in several Latin American countries there were similar despotic governments. In Britain there was the emergence of a strong fascist movement, but they did not succeed in taking over the government.

It was understandable that the Pope and other Church authorities at that time wanted to stress the point that, for Christians, only Jesus Christ should be seen as the one who has supreme authority. So it made sense for them to establish the feast of Christ the King and to insist on its importance.

The Power and Leadership of Jesus

When we Christians speak of the Kingship of Jesus, we have to insist that the kind of power exercised by Jesus was the exact opposite of the kind of oppressive political power exercised by so many of the fascist or semi-fascist political leaders of the past or the present.

His whole ministry was devoted to helping people to see how much God loved them.

So there could be no question of Jesus acting as the kind of leader who would dominate or oppress others. His form of leadership was one of empowering people, by healing them, encouraging them, loving them and showing them how lovable each one of them was.
